The Importance of Transit

Every day, travelling as a passenger by bus, is a necessary form of transportation for many individuals. To ensure that those transportation needs are being met, transit properties have to be innovative and constantly plan for the future. Transit properties have tremendous potential and can make communities stronger and more sustainable. In order for this to happen, properties need to plan and invest in their future. Leduc Transit does this by ensuring that routes are planned efficiently so that they best serve all passengers, both conventional and assisted. We are always looking to the future so that we can do our best to meet the challenges that include things like aging populations, technology, climate changes, energy and economics.

Currently, Leduc Transit's fleet has nine buses that are low-floor accessible making it easier for patrons using mobility devices. These buses have the ability to "kneel" and align with the street curbs, giving access to people who use wheelchairs and scooters or to those who are pushing a child in a stroller. In addition, Leduc Assisted Transportation (LATS), has vehicles equipped with lifts, which serve both seniors and people with disabilities. A high percentage of seniors also experience some type of disability or mobility issues, and therefore, with Canada's aging population, such services are fundamental for passengers.

Leduc Transit, which provides service in the City of Leduc, Leduc County and to Edmonton as well as, LATS

which provides services in Leduc, strive to reach goals such as;

1. Providing services that deliver an exceptional passenger experience
2. Opportunities for inclusive travel
3. Minimizing travel times between destinations
4. Increasing ridership
5. Increasing sponsorship

Part of accomplishing goals like this, is by bringing imagination and creativity to every step of planning along the way. Why are these goals so important? Transportation services are what keeps cities moving by providing an efficient means for us to get from one point to another. Transportation keeps us connected to each other and to various events.

Transit provides many benefits to communities such as ours by reducing infrastructure costs; decreasing the land, construction, and maintenance costs for expanded roadways and parking facilities, as well as by reducing traffic control and enforcement costs. Transit reduces the carbon footprint on our ever-changing climate by reducing the amount of vehicles on the road which cuts down on pollution and energy consumption. Transit makes our communities more livable by providing us with access to community-based employment, healthcare, education, and lifestyle opportunities. Transit also improves accessibility and mobility for those for those who otherwise may not be able to get out and about.

Thanks to transit, we can access the lifestyle that we love and embrace the future!

The Importance of Transit

Every day, travelling as a passenger by bus, is a necessary form of transportation for many individuals. To ensure that those transportation needs are being met, transit properties have to be innovative and constantly plan for the future. Transit properties have tremendous potential and can make communities stronger and more sustainable. In order for this to happen, properties need to plan and invest in their future. Leduc Transit does this by ensuring that routes are planned efficiently so that they best serve all passengers, both conventional and assisted. We are always looking to the future so that we can do our best to meet the challenges that include things like aging populations, technology, climate changes, energy and economics.

Currently, Leduc Transit's fleet has nine buses that are low-floor accessible making it easier for patrons using mobility devices. These buses have the ability to "kneel" and align with the street curbs, giving access to people who use wheelchairs and scooters or to those who are pushing a child in a stroller. In addition, Leduc Assisted Transportation (LATS), has vehicles equipped with lifts, which serve both seniors and people with disabilities. A high percentage of seniors also experience some type of disability or mobility issues, and therefore, with Canada's aging population, such services are fundamental for passengers.

Leduc Transit, which provides service in the City of Leduc, Leduc County and to Edmonton as well as, LATS

which provides services in Leduc, strive to reach goals such as;

1. Providing services that deliver an exceptional passenger experience
2. Opportunities for inclusive travel
3. Minimizing travel times between destinations
4. Increasing ridership
5. Increasing sponsorship

Part of accomplishing goals like this, is by bringing imagination and creativity to every step of planning along the way. Why are these goals so important? Transportation services are what keeps cities moving by providing an efficient means for us to get from one point to another. Transportation keeps us connected to each other and to various events.

Transit provides many benefits to communities such as ours by reducing infrastructure costs; decreasing the land, construction, and maintenance costs for expanded roadways and parking facilities, as well as by reducing traffic control and enforcement costs. Transit reduces the carbon footprint on our ever-changing climate by reducing the amount of vehicles on the road which cuts down on pollution and energy consumption. Transit makes our communities more livable by providing us with access to community-based employment, healthcare, education, and lifestyle opportunities. Transit also improves accessibility and mobility for those for those who otherwise may not be able to get out and about.

Thanks to transit, we can access the lifestyle that we love and embrace the future!

The Importance of Transit

Every day, travelling as a passenger by bus, is a necessary form of transportation for many individuals. To ensure that those transportation needs are being met, transit properties have to be innovative and constantly plan for the future. Transit properties have tremendous potential and can make communities stronger and more sustainable. In order for this to happen, properties need to plan and invest in their future. Leduc Transit does this by ensuring that routes are planned efficiently so that they best serve all passengers, both conventional and assisted. We are always looking to the future so that we can do our best to meet the challenges that include things like aging populations, technology, climate changes, energy and economics.

Currently, Leduc Transit's fleet has nine buses that are low-floor accessible making it easier for patrons using mobility devices. These buses have the ability to "kneel" and align with the street curbs, giving access to people who use wheelchairs and scooters or to those who are pushing a child in a stroller. In addition, Leduc Assisted Transportation (LATS), has vehicles equipped with lifts, which serve both seniors and people with disabilities. A high percentage of seniors also experience some type of disability or mobility issues, and therefore, with Canada's aging population, such services are fundamental for passengers.

Leduc Transit, which provides service in the City of Leduc, Leduc County and to Edmonton as well as, LATS

which provides services in Leduc, strive to reach goals such as;

1. Providing services that deliver an exceptional passenger experience
2. Opportunities for inclusive travel
3. Minimizing travel times between destinations
4. Increasing ridership
5. Increasing sponsorship

Part of accomplishing goals like this, is by bringing imagination and creativity to every step of planning along the way. Why are these goals so important? Transportation services are what keeps cities moving by providing an efficient means for us to get from one point to another. Transportation keeps us connected to each other and to various events.

Transit provides many benefits to communities such as ours by reducing infrastructure costs; decreasing the land, construction, and maintenance costs for expanded roadways and parking facilities, as well as by reducing traffic control and enforcement costs. Transit reduces the carbon footprint on our ever-changing climate by reducing the amount of vehicles on the road which cuts down on pollution and energy consumption. Transit makes our communities more livable by providing us with access to community-based employment, healthcare, education, and lifestyle opportunities. Transit also improves accessibility and mobility for those for those who otherwise may not be able to get out and about.

Thanks to transit, we can access the lifestyle that we love and embrace the future!

The Importance of Transit

Every day, travelling as a passenger by bus, is a necessary form of transportation for many individuals. To ensure that those transportation needs are being met, transit properties have to be innovative and constantly plan for the future. Transit properties have tremendous potential and can make communities stronger and more sustainable. In order for this to happen, properties need to plan and invest in their future. Leduc Transit does this by ensuring that routes are planned efficiently so that they best serve all passengers, both conventional and assisted. We are always looking to the future so that we can do our best to meet the challenges that include things like aging populations, technology, climate changes, energy and economics.

Currently, Leduc Transit's fleet has nine buses that are low-floor accessible making it easier for patrons using mobility devices. These buses have the ability to "kneel" and align with the street curbs, giving access to people who use wheelchairs and scooters or to those who are pushing a child in a stroller. In addition, Leduc Assisted Transportation (LATS), has vehicles equipped with lifts, which serve both seniors and people with disabilities. A high percentage of seniors also experience some type of disability or mobility issues, and therefore, with Canada's aging population, such services are fundamental for passengers.

Leduc Transit, which provides service in the City of Leduc, Leduc County and to Edmonton as well as, LATS

which provides services in Leduc, strive to reach goals such as;

1. Providing services that deliver an exceptional passenger experience
2. Opportunities for inclusive travel
3. Minimizing travel times between destinations
4. Increasing ridership
5. Increasing sponsorship

Part of accomplishing goals like this, is by bringing imagination and creativity to every step of planning along the way. Why are these goals so important? Transportation services are what keeps cities moving by providing an efficient means for us to get from one point to another. Transportation keeps us connected to each other and to various events.

Transit provides many benefits to communities such as ours by reducing infrastructure costs; decreasing the land, construction, and maintenance costs for expanded roadways and parking facilities, as well as by reducing traffic control and enforcement costs. Transit reduces the carbon footprint on our ever-changing climate by reducing the amount of vehicles on the road which cuts down on pollution and energy consumption. Transit makes our communities more livable by providing us with access to community-based employment, healthcare, education, and lifestyle opportunities. Transit also improves accessibility and mobility for those for those who otherwise may not be able to get out and about.

Thanks to transit, we can access the lifestyle that we love and embrace the future!

The Importance of Transit

Every day, travelling as a passenger by bus, is a necessary form of transportation for many individuals. To ensure that those transportation needs are being met, transit properties have to be innovative and constantly plan for the future. Transit properties have tremendous potential and can make communities stronger and more sustainable. In order for this to happen, properties need to plan and invest in their future. Leduc Transit does this by ensuring that routes are planned efficiently so that they best serve all passengers, both conventional and assisted. We are always looking to the future so that we can do our best to meet the challenges that include things like aging populations, technology, climate changes, energy and economics.

Currently, Leduc Transit's fleet has nine buses that are low-floor accessible making it easier for patrons using mobility devices. These buses have the ability to "kneel" and align with the street curbs, giving access to people who use wheelchairs and scooters or to those who are pushing a child in a stroller. In addition, Leduc Assisted Transportation (LATS), has vehicles equipped with lifts, which serve both seniors and people with disabilities. A high percentage of seniors also experience some type of disability or mobility issues, and therefore, with Canada's aging population, such services are fundamental for passengers.

Leduc Transit, which provides service in the City of Leduc, Leduc County and to Edmonton as well as, LATS

which provides services in Leduc, strive to reach goals such as;

1. Providing services that deliver an exceptional passenger experience
2. Opportunities for inclusive travel
3. Minimizing travel times between destinations
4. Increasing ridership
5. Increasing sponsorship

Part of accomplishing goals like this, is by bringing imagination and creativity to every step of planning along the way. Why are these goals so important? Transportation services are what keeps cities moving by providing an efficient means for us to get from one point to another. Transportation keeps us connected to each other and to various events.

Transit provides many benefits to communities such as ours by reducing infrastructure costs; decreasing the land, construction, and maintenance costs for expanded roadways and parking facilities, as well as by reducing traffic control and enforcement costs. Transit reduces the carbon footprint on our ever-changing climate by reducing the amount of vehicles on the road which cuts down on pollution and energy consumption. Transit makes our communities more livable by providing us with access to community-based employment, healthcare, education, and lifestyle opportunities. Transit also improves accessibility and mobility for those for those who otherwise may not be able to get out and about.

Thanks to transit, we can access the lifestyle that we love and embrace the future!

The Importance of Transit

Every day, travelling as a passenger by bus, is a necessary form of transportation for many individuals. To ensure that those transportation needs are being met, transit properties have to be innovative and constantly plan for the future. Transit properties have tremendous potential and can make communities stronger and more sustainable. In order for this to happen, properties need to plan and invest in their future. Leduc Transit does this by ensuring that routes are planned efficiently so that they best serve all passengers, both conventional and assisted. We are always looking to the future so that we can do our best to meet the challenges that include things like aging populations, technology, climate changes, energy and economics.

Currently, Leduc Transit's fleet has nine buses that are low-floor accessible making it easier for patrons using mobility devices. These buses have the ability to "kneel" and align with the street curbs, giving access to people who use wheelchairs and scooters or to those who are pushing a child in a stroller. In addition, Leduc Assisted Transportation (LATS), has vehicles equipped with lifts, which serve both seniors and people with disabilities. A high percentage of seniors also experience some type of disability or mobility issues, and therefore, with Canada's aging population, such services are fundamental for passengers.

Leduc Transit, which provides service in the City of Leduc, Leduc County and to Edmonton as well as, LATS

which provides services in Leduc, strive to reach goals such as;

1. Providing services that deliver an exceptional passenger experience
2. Opportunities for inclusive travel
3. Minimizing travel times between destinations
4. Increasing ridership
5. Increasing sponsorship

Part of accomplishing goals like this, is by bringing imagination and creativity to every step of planning along the way. Why are these goals so important? Transportation services are what keeps cities moving by providing an efficient means for us to get from one point to another. Transportation keeps us connected to each other and to various events.

Transit provides many benefits to communities such as ours by reducing infrastructure costs; decreasing the land, construction, and maintenance costs for expanded roadways and parking facilities, as well as by reducing traffic control and enforcement costs. Transit reduces the carbon footprint on our ever-changing climate by reducing the amount of vehicles on the road which cuts down on pollution and energy consumption. Transit makes our communities more livable by providing us with access to community-based employment, healthcare, education, and lifestyle opportunities. Transit also improves accessibility and mobility for those for those who otherwise may not be able to get out and about.

Thanks to transit, we can access the lifestyle that we love and embrace the future!

The Importance of Transit

Every day, travelling as a passenger by bus, is a necessary form of transportation for many individuals. To ensure that those transportation needs are being met, transit properties have to be innovative and constantly plan for the future. Transit properties have tremendous potential and can make communities stronger and more sustainable. In order for this to happen, properties need to plan and invest in their future. Leduc Transit does this by ensuring that routes are planned efficiently so that they best serve all passengers, both conventional and assisted. We are always looking to the future so that we can do our best to meet the challenges that include things like aging populations, technology, climate changes, energy and economics.

Currently, Leduc Transit's fleet has nine buses that are low-floor accessible making it easier for patrons using mobility devices. These buses have the ability to "kneel" and align with the street curbs, giving access to people who use wheelchairs and scooters or to those who are pushing a child in a stroller. In addition, Leduc Assisted Transportation (LATS), has vehicles equipped with lifts, which serve both seniors and people with disabilities. A high percentage of seniors also experience some type of disability or mobility issues, and therefore, with Canada's aging population, such services are fundamental for passengers.

Leduc Transit, which provides service in the City of Leduc, Leduc County and to Edmonton as well as, LATS

which provides services in Leduc, strive to reach goals such as;

1. Providing services that deliver an exceptional passenger experience
2. Opportunities for inclusive travel
3. Minimizing travel times between destinations
4. Increasing ridership
5. Increasing sponsorship

Part of accomplishing goals like this, is by bringing imagination and creativity to every step of planning along the way. Why are these goals so important? Transportation services are what keeps cities moving by providing an efficient means for us to get from one point to another. Transportation keeps us connected to each other and to various events.

Transit provides many benefits to communities such as ours by reducing infrastructure costs; decreasing the land, construction, and maintenance costs for expanded roadways and parking facilities, as well as by reducing traffic control and enforcement costs. Transit reduces the carbon footprint on our ever-changing climate by reducing the amount of vehicles on the road which cuts down on pollution and energy consumption. Transit makes our communities more livable by providing us with access to community-based employment, healthcare, education, and lifestyle opportunities. Transit also improves accessibility and mobility for those for those who otherwise may not be able to get out and about.

Thanks to transit, we can access the lifestyle that we love and embrace the future!
